In Bonn's view, Mr. von Wechmar said, the important thing is to get the treaty signed quickly so that its provisions for "alleviating human hardships" can be put into effect before the Christmas holidays. Because of this, he asserted, Mr. Brandt had decided to let the signing take place without his participation.

No mention was made, as the Assembly went into the fourth, day of its Middle East debate, of a warning given privately by Israel yesterday that it would pull out of the only agreed arrangements for UN peace efforts in the area if "a oneside" resolution condemning it emerged from the debate.

Sir Colin mentioned what he called terrorism stemming from Middle East unrest. The problem of international terrorism is being considered in the Assembly'e 132-nation Legal Committee, which is expected to vote on at least three rival resolutions next

"While my government cannot accept that terrorism is in any circumstances justified," Sir Colin said, "we are not blind to the need to eradicate its root cause and to deal with the problems underlying it.

advisers earlier this week over President Thieu's objections to the proposed Vietnam cease-fire. Informed sources said the South Vietnamese envoy also proposed a personal meeting between Mr, Thieu and President Nixon, but that this was rejected.

But, despite a host of speculation and unconfirmed reports, apart from continuin; adminis-tration optimism over the prospects for peace, there were no official reports released as to what took place during the Duc-Nimon meetings

Presidential Press Secretary Ron Ziegler would only describe the session as "detailed and frank" without releasing any information on what was said.

Administration officials attributed the news blackout to the fact that Mr. Nixon and Mr. Kis-singer wanted at all costs to avoid any reports which Hanoi might interpret as a U.S. retreat from the commitments that Mr. Kissinger made to chief North Viet-namese negotiator Le Duc Tho.

The third meeting between Mr. Duc and Mr. Kissinger took place against a background of reports that the United States has told South Vietnam in definite terms that it will no longer back President Thieu to the extent it has previously and has bluntly spelled out how far it will defer to Mr. Thieu's wishes.

Complete Suspension

Included in these reports was one from a CBS network correspondent in Salgon that Mr. Duc reported to the South Vietnamese president that the United States intends to sign a cease-lire agreement with Hanol and that Saigon faces a complete suspension of all military and economic aid if it refuses to go

The report, quoting reliable sources, said that President Nixon was said to have sent word to Mr. Thieu not to worry about the cease-fire agreement and that the most important thing was the continuance of U.S. military and economic aid to South Vietnam after the shooting stops.

Meanwhile, in Paris the Saigon delegation to the Paris talks denied published reports that South Vietnam had scaled down some of its peace demands. It again called for a total pullout of the 145,000 North Vietnamese (Continued on Page 2, Col 1)

DUBLIN, Dec. 1.—Bomb blests rocked the center of Dublin tonight, killing at least two people and injuring up to 200 as Premier Jack Lynch won a key vote in the Dall on a hill simed at crushing the illegal Irish Republican Army. The vote was 70 to 23 as many members of the opposition in the 144-seat house abstained. Mr. Lynch won his easy victory when the main opposition party canceled its plans to vote against the bill following the two terrorist explosions.

The premier said he would call sion of the Senate tomorrow to deal with the legislation.
The IRA, the main target of the emergency legislation, immediately issued a statement de-nying all responsibility for the bomb attacks.

The militant Protestant Ulster Defense Association in Belfast also disclaimed any role in the

U.S. Is Victor In a UN Vote On Budget

By Anthony Astrachan
UNITED NATIONS, Dec. 1 (WP).-The United States won the first round today in its battle to cut its contribution to the UN budget-by a larger margin than expected.

This appeared to eliminate the danger that the United States would turn its back completely on the UN. Many delegates had feared that this would be the ultimate result if the United States lost this vote.

The large margin also appeared to reduce the likelihood that many countries would resent the imposition of a unilateral deci-sion on the UN. Diplomats had expressed such resentment earlier because the U.S. Congress had already voted to cut the U.S. contribution to the regular UN budget to a maximum of 25 percent starting Jan. 1, 1974. U.S. New Pays 31.52%

The General Assembly's Budgetary Committee approved a U.S. resolution calling for a celling of 25 percent on any nation's contribution. The United States now pays 31.53 percent. The vote was 67 to 30 with 32 abstentions. This was more than a two-thirds majority. Had it been less, the opponents might have tried to insist that the matter needed a two-thirds vote when it comes before the full Assembly. The United States would then have opposed the contention.

As things stand, such an opposition move is highly unlikely. After the Assembly approves the resolution, the Committee on Contributions will meet next March to set a new scale of assessments imposing the 25 percent ceiling "as soon as practicable." That may mean a grad-ual reduction to 25 percent by 1976, which would still need reconciliation with the congressional position.

U.S. Ambassador George Bush said the result is "good for the U.S., it's good for the U.S., it's good for the U.S. ambassador. It's the best thing that can hapwas in a mountain retreat. On pen in terms of generating support for the United Nations in the United States." The actual difference between MacStiofain still has not taken any solid food since he was arrested Nov. 19 and later sentenced to six months in prison for membership in the IRA. An army statement today said his condition was unchanged.

MacStiofain's appeal last night, through his attorney, for thou-sands of persons to take to the streets in protest of government actions was ignored last evening. But then came the demonstrations and bombings tonight in Dublin. And in Galway today, truncheon-wielding police clashed with hundreds of students protesting the anti-IRA bill.

U.S. Faulted by EEC Aide Over Trade Policy Attitudes

By David Haworth

BRUSSELS, Dec. 1 (THT) .-Strong criticism of U.S. trade policy and attitudes toward the European Economic Community's trading arrangements with third countries was voiced here today by Ralf Dahrendorf, the commissioner responsible for EEC external relations.

He said the recently signed trade agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union, by stabilizing this section of world trade, was far more injurious to a system of free trade than any number of REC preferential agreements with countries which the United States has attacked.

Addressing a conference of diplomats and businessmen sponsored by the Belgian Institute of International Relations, Mr. Dahrendorf said he failed to understand the intensity of feeling in the U.S. administration about the EEC ambition to develop a "global" policy towards Mediter-ranean countries which will in-clude a huge free trade zone for industrial goods within five years.

The United States has said that the reverse preferences involved in this scheme are objectionable, but Mr. Dahrendorf angered American observers here by suggesting the EEC might also develop a similar strategy with Southeast Asian countries.

He referred to the not altogether flippant remark put to him during a recent Washington visit asking why the EEC didn't extend an association agreement to the U.S. Sixth Fleet by saying it indicated a "fundamental misunderstanding" in America about what the Common Market hoped to achieve in the Mediterranean. He said there ought to be a political division of labor in the area between the United States and the European countries, saying it was his profound belief that the Atlantic relationship could only be as good as the ability by both sides to cooperate with each other.

Mr. Dahrendorf's call for more "subtlety" in international relations drew wry comments from Americans present, who felt his remarks were a good example of "dialogue of the deaf"—as EEC-U.S. relations have been described recently. But anticipating a European tour by President Nixon next year, Mr. Dahrendorf suggested there should be a round-table discussion between the President and the heads of state or prime ministers of the enlarged European community at which every aspect of trade, defense and economics could be freely discussed He noted an "apparent impatience" on America's part with the EEC's habit of discussing these policy areas separately. "The United States has a valid point here." Mr. Dahrendorf said. These policies are certainly connected and so far Europe has not been able to respond adequately to the U.S. challenge."

Flanigan, vill continue as chairman of the Council on International Economic Policy Mr. Shultz served as Secretary of Labor and director of the Office of Management and Budget before becoming Secretary of the Treasury earlier this year. He said the new economic council he will head would be composed of the heads of the Labor, Com-

Budget, the Council of Economic Advisers, the Cost of Living Council and the Council on Interna-tional Economic Policy. He said, however, that much of the council's work would be done by groups composed of agency representatives who may rank below cabinet level. He said he would have an office in the White House and "a very small staff." Mr. Shultz, 51, who joined the administration when it was form-

SAN DIEGO. Dec. 1 (NYT).— Crewmen from the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk have told Navy investigators that the ship's captain had an open disagreement with his executive officer after racial violence broke out on the ship while it was at sea six weeks ago. According to the crewmen, the disagreement grew out of a decision by the executive officer, Comdr. Benjamin Cloud, who is black, in his attempt to avert racial fights by ordering black sailors to one end of the ship and the marines on board to the other end.

They said that moments after the executive officer gave his orders over the ship's loudspeaker system, the commander. Capt. Marland W. Townsend jr., countermanded them. He reportedly said that be did not want men congregating in any part of the ship.

The sailors said that the cap-tain had called the executive officer "misinformed" and that, using an obscenity, he had said someone were to write a book about that night, that episode would have to be the most messed-up chapter. No Racial Animosity

While there were reports of disagreement, none of the sailors indicated that there had been any racial animosity between the white captain and the black executive officer.

The disagreement between the two officers added another dion to the recial conflict that erupted aboard the Kitty Hawk on the night of Oct, 12, the day after the 80,000-ton aircraft carrier left Subic Bay in the Philippines and sailed to-ward Vietnam. The six-hour incident left more than 40 persons injured and led to the arrests of 28 sailors, all but one of them

The Kitty Hawk arrived at its home port here Tuesday, with its crew of nearly 5,000 officers and men under orders not to discuss the racial incidents.

However, these accounts of the Oct. 12 incident were obtained by Navy officers who interviewed sailors on Oct. 21 in a pretrial HELSINKI, Dec. I (AP) .-Romania, again stressing its independent stance in the Com-Bormann was sentenced to munist bloc, proposed today that a European security conference firmly bind all nations to renounce the use of force in any circumstances.

The Romanian speech was the 19th in a series of policy statements by delegates of the 34 countries preparing a security conference.

Romania mada no distinction between East-West disputes or a future situation in which a group of Communist countries might try to force a bloc member back into line-such as the Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968.

Delegation head Mirces Balanescu said the conference chould adopt an "explicit" document saying that 'in no circumstances whatever, in no form and under no pretext" can one nation use or threaten to use force against

The statement seemed aimed at the type of sovereignty concept used to justify action against Czechoslovakia. The Romanian language was sweeping enough to rule out any contention that Communist countries have a right to "aid" another Communist country if the socialist system

The emigration fees for Jews was raised in the context of talks most-favored-nation status for the Soviet Union, Sen. Humphrey said. The Nixon adminis-tration has proposed this status, but Congress must epprove it. Seventy-five senators joined Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D., Wash., in co-sponsoring an amendment to the legislation which would make it conditional on Soviet retraction of the new exit fees.

Soriet authorities began telling prospective Jewish emigrants in August that they would have to pay special fees up to $30,000 before leaving for Israel. The fees applied to anyone with a higher education, and were meant to repay the state for that education, the authorities

Since then, the tax has been applied erratically. Just before the U.S. elections it was waived for several hundred educated Jews, though technically it still remains in force.

Sen. Humphey said that the three legislators tried to tell tha Soviet officials they met that concern over this matter in Congress was strong and serious, and should not be dismissed as an election-year tactic. In response, Sen. Humphrey said, the three were told "generally that it was an internal matter. I would consider that a negative answer," he added, but he said none of them expected a public retraction of Soviet policy because of their comments

The congressmen said they found great interest here in expanding Soviet-American trade. But even Mr. Kosygin, Sen. Humphrey said, was conscious of a possibly dangerous "euphoria" among American businessmen about the possibilities for future trade.

Agricultural officials told them that the Russians thought it would be cheaper to feed their Far Eastern population with wheat imported from San Francisco than with their own grain sent from European Russia. This suggested possible long-term deals in wheat. The Russians also repeated their interest in continued purchase of American corn and soybeans.

Rep. Reuss said that Soviet officials had ecknowledged to him that, for the foresceable future, Soviet exports to America would he smaller than U.S. exports to the Soviet Union. Key Progress Cited Toward Atomic Generation of Power

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AF). -The Atomic Energy Commission announced today significant new progress toward the goal of taming the H-bomb's atomic reactions to generate electricity.

"Controlled fusion," as this goal is known, would open the way for new power generation drawing almost unlimited fuel supplies from the world's oceans. and perhaps solving the difficult radiation problems of today atomic generation of power.

The AEC said scientists at its laboratory in Princeton, N.J., using an experimental electro-magnetic device first developed in the Soviet Union, have managed to bring fusion fuel closer than ever before to the high density and temperature needed for a fusion reaction.

The AEC said the Princeton lab achieved its success by redesigning the Soviet "Tokamak" device in ways that allowed it to compress the fusion fuel far more than was previously thought possible by applying pulses of magnetic energy.

Major Step Forward

"While this is a major step forward in Tokamak research," said AEC Chairman James R. Schlesinger, "I would hesitate to use the term breakthrough, Wa still have many years of hard work ahead of us to develop this concept into a practical power

Robert L. Hirsch, director of the AEC Division of Controlled Thermonuclear Research, said three more methods of heating the fusion fuel were being tested. He said the AEC did not expect to design and build a labo-ratory device, "putting it all together" to achieve the first controlled fusion reaction, until the end of this decade.

Practical Size

Even if the process proved acceptable, he added, much development would be necessary to create fusion reactors of practical powergenerating size.

Present atomic power plants rely on a process called fission in which large atoms—Uranium— 235—are split into smaller atoms. In splitting, the atoms release

General Assembly Unit Votes To Create a UN University

By M. A. Farber

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Dec. (NYT).—The establishment of United Nations university, a network of postgraduate resear and training centers around the world, was approved yesterday by the General Assembly's Economic Committee.

The vote on the Japanesesponsored resolution, which virtually assures passage of the item by the General Assembly next month, was 86 to 8, with three abstentions. The Soviet Union and its allies cast the negativa votes: Canada, Cuba and Mexico abstained. Without a main campus, degree-granting power or students and faculty in the ordinary sense, the university would bear little resemblance to a traditional institution of higher learning.

Its chief purpose as a decentrained community of experienced and young scholars, according to UN officials, would be the study of 'urgent questions facing humanity as a whole, such as peaceful coexistence, human rights, development and the global implications of science and technology."
The system, it is hoped, would also increase contact between scholars from developing and industrialized countries and stimnlate interest among academicians in helping to realize the principles of the UN Charter.

Officials here said the university's permanent faculty would be kept small, partly to avoid ac-centuating the "brain drain" problem faced by poor nations when their scholars - emigrate. Many of the scholars would stay at a center no more than a lew months or a year.

Some of the centers, whether located in developing or industriglized states, would grow out of existing campus programs; others would start from scratch. The university would be coordinated by a president or rector and his staff, who would also ulan some of the centers' programs. A governing board would be composed primarily of scholars

Eight countries have already expressed an interest in having a center. Kenya, for example, is interested in a center for research on natural resources and Austria in a center on limnology, or the study of lakes. India has suggested establishing a center at Jawaharlal Nehru University in New Delhi, Japan, which has stressed a need for industrialized nations to help developing states acquire centers, is itself interested in hosting the headquarters American Church Honor of the university and a center. It is uncertain whether public or PARIS, Dec. 1 (IHT).-The private education or government leaders in the United States would seek a center.

U.S. Senators Confer With Czech Chiefs

PRAGUE, Dec. 1 (AP).—A group of 11 U.S. senators held surprise unscheduled talks today with Czechoslovak Communist leaders, and Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D., Wash, said later, "It helped to break the ice. It was the first movement since 1968." Meeting with the senators were President Ludvik Svobods, Communist party chief Gustav Husak, Foreign Minister Bohuslav Chonoupek and party secretary Vasil Bilak Sen, Stuart Symington, D., Mo., said the meeting was "very constructive" and reported that general matters and trade were dis-cussed. He added: "Nothing but good could come of the meeting." Sen. Jackson said it was loosening-up meeting" and that Mr. Husak "was very apprecia-tive of our visit."

The senators, who later flew on to Madrid, asked yesterday for the meeting with Czech leaders, making the request after their arrival in Prague, but it was not certain until noon today whether the session would materialize,

The meeting included a speech by Mr. Svobods mentioning the 750,000 Americans of Czech origin and their ties with their homeland. Relations between the United States and Czechoslovakia have been cool since the 1968 Soviet invasion that crushed tha liberalization period under former party chief Alexander Dubcek.

Major Steps' Urged Foreign Minister Chonoupek last month called for "major steps" to improve relations between Czechoslovakia and the United States.

Sen. Jackson said vesterdov that "the time has come to make move toward a thaw in relations" The senators flew in a U.S.

Astronauts Get Last Physical, But Strike Threatens Launch

(UPI).—Apollo-17s astronauts to- port contract last year. day got the medical okay for launch Wednesday night, and the space agency took action to sidestep a threatened strike that could disrupt the final moonshot.

Dr. Royce Hawkins, medical operations director for Apollo-17. said Eugene A. Cernan, Ronald E. Evans and Harrison H. Schmitt were in excellent shape for the 13-day expedition to a northeastern moon valley.

"The crew is well rested, in good spirits and physically in excellent condition," Dr. Hawkins said.

4 Hours of Tests

The astronauts spent four hours in the base medical facility and underwent blood tests. X-rays, cardiovascular, ves-tibular and other tests. Besides confirming the astronauts were in good health, the examination gathered clinical data to be compared with results upon their return to earth Dec. 19.

The labor dispute remained a potenilal obstacle, however. Kurt H. Debus, director of the Kennedy Space Center, sent letters to all 15,000 moonport employees today advising them of sleps to take to avoid picket lines if a strike develops.

The dispute involved the Boeing Co. and 60 technical writers and other documentation services workers seeking reinstatement of 30 to 50 percent pay cuts re-

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (AP).
-Some 200,000 members of the United Mine Workers begin casting ballots for their officers today under the tightest federal control in the history of the American labor movement. The principal election fight is hetween union president W.A. (Tony) Boyle, 70, whose last opponent was murdered, and challenger Arnold Miller of Ohley, The election was ordered by a federal judge after finding that Mr. Boyle's 1969 re-election over the late Joseph A. Yablonski was marred by widespread violations of labor law. Mr. Yablonski, his wife and daughter were found shot to death in their Clarksville. Pa., home several weeks after the 1969 election. Several union officials have been indicted in connection with the crime. Mr. Boyle has re-peatedly denied any knowledge of the slayings. Mr. Miller, a retired coal miner, was nominated by Miners for Democracy, a rebel group formed by supporters of Mr. Yablonski, including his two lawyer sons, Joseph A. Yabionski and Ken-neth Yahlonski, Eligible to vote are 120,000 working coal miners and 80,000 retired miners in 25 states. The bal-

Mills Promises Highest Priority For Tax Reform

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Dec. 1 (AP).—Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D. Ark., says tax reform will be the first order of business for his House Ways and Means Com-mittee when Congress convenes

Rep. Mills said yesterday that he hoped tax-reform hearings could begin around Feb. 1, adding that "the sooner we can get to it the sooner I'll he satisfied." "What I want to do is to look exhaustively, extensively ot the entire Internal Revenue Code, everything in It, because you've got about as many inequities on

State Dept. Opens New Message Center

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 (UPD). Secretary of State William P. Rogers yesterday inaugurated the State Department Operations Center by exchanging messages with U.S. Ambassador Martin J. Hillenbrand in West Germany. In order to demonstrate the new communications system, Mr. Rogers sent Mr. Hilleohrand a coded message asking how relations were between Bonn and Washington. Mr. Hillenhrand responded from Bonn that relations

"couldn't be better." The new operations communications system, which is the nerve center by which the department communicates with its missions abroad, is designed to cables and 30,000 documents received or sent annually by the

135.000-Year-Old Bone Rated Key to Early Man's Writing

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP).-A containing true art and notation, bone unearthed in France that in the current issue of Science contains symbols engraved by magazine, man at least 135,000 years ago The Free was described today as one of the leter finds, Mr. Marshack the key finds in archaeology.

Alexander Marshack, a reeearcher at Harvard University's Peabody Museum of Archaeology and Ethnology, in a paper pre-pared for the American Anthropological Association meeting in Toronto, analyzed the find as a "pre-writing" step hy early man.

The bone, part of an ox rib, was found at Pech de Laze, France, by François Bordes, director of the laboratory of prehistory at the University of Bordeaux.

Mr. Marshack noted that the age of the find, 135,000 to 150,000 years old, dated this work of the Acheulian hunters of the period 50,000 to 75,000 years before Neanderthal man was producing symbols.

"The bone documents a sur-prisingly high level of imageand-symbol-making thousands of years before Neanderthal man and before the full development of modern man," he said.

Symbolism's Origin

The researcher rated the engraved bona as comparable to the discovery of the first man-like skulls and of tools. He said it provided "the first clue" to the origins of later symbolism and, "still later, true art and notation."

The engraving suggests the presence of "a high level of language usage" by the Acheulian hunters, Mr. Marshack said. The researcher has analyzed a much later Ice Age composition,

Alleged Air Charter Swindle

swindle, according to three of the The alleged swindle came to light when police arrested a man known as G.R. Schreck, reportedly a German who was said to have operated the European Air Charter Service, which offered Paris-New York round-trip flights on Boeing-707s for 8100

It was charged that the supposed airline, known as EACS, was really no more than a telephone number posted at the American Center for Students and Artists on Boulevard Raspail and Mr. Schreck's hotel room.

EAC's notices on bulletin boards offered weekly Saturday flights throughout December, mostly for young Americans on low budgets who wanted to return home for Christmas. Many of these young people have now lost both their money and the trip home.

Diane Strully, 23, Jim Wetteroth, 32, of New York City and Josette Sayers, 23, of Simsbury, Conn., were the three Americans who grew suspicious of Mr. Schreck and began further investigating.

Not in Bad Shape

"We're not in as bad shape as some others," said Mr. Wetteroth, who lost the $55 one-way fare. He said that many young pas-sengers had used their last funds to reserve a place and now were without money.

Miss Strully, who learned of the EACS flight through the American Center, said she had worked for Mr. Schreck when he offered her a free flight home if she would answer phones for a time she took "too many calls to remember," and even received calls from other charter lines wanting to switch their passengers over to EACS.

Miss Sayers said that the three tried repeatedly during the week to check into EACS by contacting two other charter lines that Mr. Schreck said he represented. German Air and Danair. She said they were repeatedly told by those two lines that they were unable to confirm whether Mr. Schreck represented them or not. The three decided to take their case to the French police after representatives of Danair finally called back to tell them Mr. Schreck did not represent them and that EACS was, according to Miss Strully, "nonexistent and illegal,"

In the meantime, the police, believing Miss Strully to be involved, detained her for ques-tioning. She was released Wednesday morning after spending the night in jail. Mr. Schreck is still being held.

Litvinov Returns

The disease is medically known as acute infectious gastroenteritis, and the virus captured on film at the National Institutes of Health is one that on Oct. 20-31, 1968, infected more than half the students and teachers at an elementary school in Norwalk, Ohio. Photographic identification of

Other viruses, too, are believed to cause gastroenteritis and a number of known bacteria cause the same type of disease. Viruses, an official at the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, said, usually attack in winter outbreaks. Bacteria usually attack in summer, often by food contemination.

Antonio Segni, Ex-President And Twice Premier of Italy

ROME, Dec. I (AF).-Antonio (NYI).-R.L. Duffus, 84, a retired iegni, 81, a former president of editorial writer and reporter for Italy who also served twice as nier died here today.

After two decades of political ctivity for the Christian Democrat party, Mr. Segni became Italy's third president in 1962. In August, 1964, a stroke left him partly paralyzed. He resigned as president when his doctors said that he could not carry out his duties and had lived since in near seclusion, with his wife, Basically a conservative, he served as minister in nearly all of Italy's 26 cabinets between 1943 and 1962, when he became president.

Professor, Farmer

A professor of civil law since 1925, Mr. Segni was also a gentleman farmer in his native dinis. In the late 1940s, he was the author of a controversial land-reform program that led to the expropriation of big estates including a quarter of his own for landless peasants.

In the late 1950s, as defense minister, he worked out details of the accord with the United States to set up missile bases in Italy.

He served as premier from 1955 scope at National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md. to 1957 and from 1959 to 1960. Mr. Segni was a soft-spoken aristocrat who outlasted his opponents in the rough and tumble of Italy's political battles. Behind his polished manners lurked the stemine of a tireless debater.

In 1964, he was awarded the Charlemagne Prize for his contimed efforts toward European

This large photo exhibition is interesting, if uneven, Pictures of French officials visiting factories, etc., are considered a necessity. On the other hand there is a lot of good material. A montage of faces showing the great ethnic variety of the Soviet Union greets the visitor at the entrance. The overall tone is just too bland-but the blandness is also a consequence of the country's mentality and reflects its ideals. 1200 photos by 600 photographers

Taples, Galerie Maeght, 13 Rue de Téhéran, Paris 8, to Dec. 21.

Recent paintings, assemblages and objects by Catalan artist Antonio Taples attest once again to his unwavering authority and stern irony. He can take trashy material and transform it into a work of sumptuous dignity. He can also take junk and exhibit it as such. And because of the context one feels impelled to respect it. Tàpies suggests an ethics which he neither imposes nor articulates.

Destarac, Galerie Ariel, 140 Bou-'levard Haussmann, Paris 8, to of 29. This is her first exhibition. She handles her color and brush with considerable a surance. Whole canvases dauhed with a single color, small, illegible inscriptions that add a touch of different color and pose something of a riddle, an occasional, faint dotted line, these are the rather hazardous elements she uses. I say hazardous because it is easy to be incoherent with this sort of material—yet ber work carries with it a sense of real pictorial coherence.

Xavier Coll, Galerie Janine Hao, 3 Cour de Rohan, Paris 6, to Dec. 20.

Coll's present work, influenced by a prolonged stay in India, shows a concern with the rhythm of geometric forms. The paintings are not totally unified in style because the artist appears attracted both by the atructural and the reflective MICHAEL GIBSON.

to Heari Evenepoel. Royale, Brussels, to Dec. 10. In the late 19th century, Henri Evenepoel left his native Belgium to study painting in Farls, notably in Gustava Moreau's atelier. His work gives a panoramic view of Paris during the Belle Epoque-the portraits of children are specially endearing. A tiny, fat-cheeked child hundled in bulky, spotted muslin turns out to be Matlese's daughter. A stay in Algeria for his health Evenepoel left his native Belgium the artist died of tuberculosis at the age of 27-inspired a series of Algerian market scenes, fore-runners of the fauve era with their sun-imbued color and supple merging of bodies and background. Multicolored robes settle into swathes of pure form, brown legs break out of sandy earth in quick, dancing movements.

Evenencei's mastery of movement, color and wide canvases would have served him well on stage or on film. In fact, he was interested in photography. Before his death in 1899, he had used an early-model box camera to record children in movement. landscapes, his friends and family. The photographs are real artistic achievements and have been included in this exhibition as a complement to his paintings.

Tremois engravings on gold, drawings. Hilton-Govaerts Gallery, Hilton hotel, 38 Bonlevard Waterloo, Brussels, to

Two solid gold bowls engraved with characteristic Tremois designs sit complacently gleaming as the focal point of this exhibition. But the real scene-stealers are the dark, ungilded animal drawings. Sad, frowning apes and monkeys crouch chained beside man, very reminiscent of Bruegel's two enigmatic apes on a bridge overlooking the Scheldt. Frogs and grasshoppers copuin contemplative ritual among the interlaced humans; a fine, upstanding bulldog is drawn in loving detail. The monkey recurs again and again.

Lovernaking is the theme of most of the drawings, monotypes, gold engravings. As a counterpoint to the human couples, there is usually a bit of builtin symbolism, the universe seen as floating spheres and bursting suns, crisscrossed with text algebra. The plates are engraved with the same light, firm line. bodies embracing amid generous chunks of quotations.

THE ART MARKET.

The Makings of a Supersale Starring La Tour and Titian

By Souren Melikian

ONDON (IRT).—While Paris is beginning to get a chare of the Lold master art market (IRT, Nov. 25), London is still a few steps head, or so the sale scheduled next Friday at Christie's would

It is, in fact, a supersale with works so famous and glamorous It is, in there, a supersate with works so ramons and gramorous just it is attracting a great deal of attention outside professional pheres. The star piece is Georges de La Tour's "The Beggars' trawl," which was exhibited at the Orangerie in Paris at the 1972

a Tour exhibition, together with the recent purchase by the outre of another La Tour for 10 million francs and the discovery prebruary, 1972, of an unknown La Tour in the attic of a small nglish museum has created much excitement about this artist's work.

"The Beggars' Brawl," apparently, is the first La Tour to come at a public auction. It belongs to a private English collector at was identified, in 1971, as the work of the 17th-century French agazine. (It was he, incidentally, who this year identified the collector agazine. The Dice Players" as a La Tour.) agazine. (It was ne, incidentally, who also year attended to the painting, "The Dice Players," as a Le Tour.)

or, the owner of "The Beggars' Brawl" seems to have thought that the was opportune for a sale—and he offered his picture to instite's during the Paris exhibition.

Such a key piece is essential if an ordinary sale is to become a persale. Another essential is glamorous provenance. Ideally, the persale should consist of a single collection built up by some well-own connoisseur. Glamorous works from glamorous collections sate an atmosphere of expectation and suspense and advertise emselves in a way that money cannot buy.

Of course, in the old master category, no auctioneer can hope find a single collection to put on the block. So such sales must built up from separate items from many sources. Auctioneers e extremely reticent about discussing how they do this.

But the geographical provenance of the works coming up for is next Friday shows how much groundwork must be involved. aving aside the La Tour, there is a major Titian, simply called alone." It is probably one of the last really important Titians illable on the market. What makes it doubly glamorous is its raurdinary pedigree.

It was acquired from the Venetian collection of Bartolomeo is Nave in 1638 by Viscount Feilding for King Charles I. By 9, it was in the collection of Archduke Leopold William of Austria, er Cromwell had ordered the sale of the royal collection. Later belonged to Emperor Leopold I of Austria, Emperor Charles VI Austria and the counts Raczynski of Poland. Early in this tury, it was hanging in a mansion in Vienna. Christle's describes picture as the "property of a gentleman" and does not identify country of origin. It came from Switzerland, according to well-

A Collection

The third major glamorizer in the sale is a series of primitives, t of the collection amassed by Richard W. Weininger in Geray in the 1920s—the collector now lives in New York. The es includes a rare "Christ on the Cross" (14 1/2 by 11 3/4 inches) Ambrosius Benson, a fine Adriaen Isenbrandt, "Saint Francis eiving the Stigmata" (13 1/4 by 10 1/4 inches), and an exceptional rait by a German artist, Hans Krell, whose works are still rarer a those of Benson. The Krell is dated 1534 and can be rated all counts an important piece of museum quality.

From Stockholm came a major Ribera, "Saint Bruno and Saint edict in Adoration Before the Infant Christ" (88 1/2 by 75 1/2 165). And from Stockholm again, although from a different source, comes one of the best pictures by Hendrick Terhruggben, a Caravagesque painter to whom Le Tour was much indebted. Mon-treal was the source of a "Madonna and Child" by Sodoma and the Dayton (Ohio) Art Institute that of a good Abel Grimmer (29 1/4 inches in diameter).

A splendid work by another Caravaggesque artist, Pietro da Cortona, "The Adulteress Before Christ" (58 by 89 inches) was found in a private English collection. The present seller remains anonymous but the history of the picture speaks for itself. It was commissioned in 1626 by Asdrubale Mattel and hung in the Palazzo Mattel for generations. This picture alone has aroused much attention in

The sale inventory was impressive. An 11th-hour addition, possibly prompted by the brilliant collection already scheduled for sale, came from Stavros Niarchos. This is a Rubens self-portrait. It was bought in Ghent in September, 1840, on behalf of one of the most famous 19th-century collectors, the Duc d'Arenberg. In 1958, it was exhibited at the Tate Gallery in the "Niarchos Collection of Paintings" show.

Thus, this formidable group of old masters has been assembled from all over the world with the care one might expect of a museum curator. In fact, Gregory Martin, a director in Christle's old master department, is a former assistant keeper at the National Gallery of London.

It is at such supersales that records are shattered. Afterwards, price levels aften drop back to "normal"-which could seem perplexing to the uninformed. But the supersale is now a well established feature of the market and understanding how it works and what it does to prices is essential to any collector or auctioneer.

France will have its own supersale on the same day, Dec. 8, at Palais Galliers, when the second part of the Raphaël Esmerian collection of rare books goes on the block. It will be a supersale partly because of the interest created last June when the first part of the collection was sold and partly because Mr. Esmerian has made great contributions to scholarship in his collecting field, contributions which are reflected in the quality of his collections.

By John Walker LONDON, Dec. 1 (IHT).—Alfred Fagon is a welcome new voice, a West Indian playwright with an exuberant and comic sense of life. His "11 Josephine House," this sesson's first evening production at The Almost Theatre, is a boisterous comedy about Jamaicans in England. It is also a study of a closelyknit family group trying to main-tain a cultural identity, to cling to its roots, in an alien and largely hostlie environment. Set in Bristol, a city that grew rich and fat with the slave trade, it gives us people who have been uprooted in mid-life: Brother George (Oscar James), a muscelege Cocar James, a mis-cular Christian who clings to the holy life like a drunk hanging on to a lamppost, Gloria (Mona Hammond), his devoted disciple, and her brother Harry, played by the author, and Cousin Castan (Horsce James), who both prefer a little drinking and gambling after a hard day's work read with great interest Vinceut Sheean's recent letter about stolen paintings (THT, Nov. 291. The art thefts which justifiably horrify him are only the spectacular examples of what has become an international phenomenon and a billiondollar enterprise: the pillage of cultural patrimony and the illicit traffic in these objects. The paintings reproduced in the Herald Tribune. Interpol's most wanted art objects, are related to the overall problem in somewhat the same way that the FBI's 10 most wanted men relate to international crime. They represent, as it were, the tip of the leeberg.

Mr. Sheean correctly notes the practical impossibility of guarding all the churches in Italy from theft. Yet this problem is a relatively simple one when compared to the surreillance of temples concealed deep within tropical juncles, or in an obscure corner of the Indian subcontinent, not to mention the saleguarding of yet undiscovered archaeological sites throughout the world. As Mr. Sheean also notes, the foundation that underlies art thefts is the availability of a buying market for illicit objects: dealers, collectors, and even museums. One solution to the problem, seemingly the most practical, is to try and cut off the money sources which encour-age the thefts. This principle has been the point of departure for the International Council of Museums in its activities to combat art thefts.

ICOM's program in this realm has revolved around the formulation of a set of principles of "ethical acquisition" by which no museum would acquire (cit) by gift or purchase or otherwise) any object whose licit provenance could not be proved. In the past century, museums have come to represent collectively the largest direct consumer of cultural property on the market. They also represent the ultimate depository for most objects which are at present privately owned (partic-ularly in the United States, where a gift to a museum represents a considerable tax advantage to the donor). Thus by exercising a self-imposed restraint on acquisition, the museum places sanctions on those collectors anxlous to build "museum-quality" collections, and eventually on the market itself. More and more accept this acquisition code-if not for moral reasons, in order to protect themselves from vulnershility to scandals and the acquisition of fakes. Such control, however, is always more compilcated than is apparent on the To begin with, an efficient system must be developed for verifying an object's licit origin, and for disseminating, on a worldwide scale, information regarding therts and su property. As a practical help, ICOM has assembled an archive of worldwide legislations protecting cultural property, and a text summarizing these laws will be published shortly. More, however, must be done in order to provide a workable application for the idealistic principle of "ethical acquisition." Greater cooperation is needed between the international organizations presently working to restrict illicit traffic-such as UNESCO, Interpol, ICOM and the individual customs agencies and police in each country.

ICOM has proposed the crestion of a central agency which through which such organizations could exchange information, and to which museums, collectors, or dealers could apply to verify the origin of a particular object. A practical working plan, and general objectives of such an agency have been ootlined, and contacts have been established with various organizations which would participate. Severe financial limitations, however, have prevented the formation of such an and efforts to aron foundation support have as yet been unsuccessful. Because of lack of funds, ICOM's present program must in fact be reduced next year to the simple maintenance of documentary informstion on the subject. In a situation where neglect is by no means benign, such neglect is no less than disastrous.

Mr. Sheenn has good cause for his concern. His concern is shared by others. We can only hope that the means will soon become available with which to translate concern into action,

New York Entertainment: Miller's New Play

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (IET).—
This is how critics rate the new stage productions: "The Creation of the World and Other Business," a three-act comedy by Arthur Miller, based on the hiblical story of Genesis, opened last night at the Broadway Shubert Theater, where the critical reaction was generally mixed. "Some people are going to be disappointed. I was myself." Clive Barnes, of The New York Times, writes. "At times Miller seems to be attempting Shavian dialectic, while where he is milking jokes from simple anachronisms, and homey, nudging contemporaneities . quite funny at times . . . but a little cheap and easy." Ethics and a Free Press there were limits on the protection a newsman might reasonably expect to flow from the Constitution, there has been much discussion about how large a dent the court pot in the First Amendment right to a free press. The fact that following the decision. two newsmen—Peter Bridge and William Farr—have spent time in jail for refusing to reveal confidential sources, does little to comfort those who worry that the court's intrusion was considerably broader than it was constructive. Thus, the legislative debates about constructing protections or "shields" around newsmen's privileges have mushroomed around the country.

The latest participant in this debate—and particularly robust one at that—is Gov. Thomas J. Meskill of Connecticut. He is opposed to shield laws—with a vengeance. He opposes them because he believes that communications privileged from the scrutiny of investigating officials, grand juries and the courts must flow from one-to-one relationships in which one of the participants is a highly trained professional—a doctor, a clergyman or a lawyer. These persons, the governor contends, by dint of the study they have undertaken, the professional examinations they must undergo and the penalties for improper professional conduct to which they are subject, "have earned the right to privileged communications." Newsmen, being much more ordinary folk and not being subject to similar rigors, have no standing to claim similar privileges.

There is something to be said for the governor's argument, but not much. Doctors, lawyers and clergymen—in their roles as personal counselors—are trained to deal with the most intimate human problems in ways that require the highest professionalism and the utmost trust. The protections erected around their communications are designed to protect parishioners, clients and patients who have confided something close and precious, often at a time of great human vulnerability. The training, testing and supervision of those professionals goes largely to the trust inherent in those relationships.

All of that is good and valuable and right, as far as it goes, but it is largely irrelevant to the newsman's privilege. The newsman has a professional obligation to his sources similar to that of the lawyer, clergyman and doctor, but he also has a larger obligation to Ever since the celebrated Caldwell case, the public and the country. If Gov. Meskill in which the Supreme Court decided that had sought guidance on this issue, he need have looked no further than the neighboring state of New York where Gov. Nelson Rockefeller seems to have a perfect grasp of the issue. "Freedom of the press,' the governor said the other day, "Is a fundamental principle on which this nation was founded. I'm convinced that if reporters should ever lose the right to protect the confidentiality of their sources, then serious investigative reporting will simply dry up."

The seat of the newsman's privilege is in the Constitution and has to do with the fragility of freedom, rather than with the vulnerability of an individual human being. Caldwell, Bridge and Farr did not risk the unpleasantness of a jail term merely because they had been trained to deal with a certain kind of individual problem in a climate of confidentiality, but because they believed that the freest possible flow of information in the society was the greatest bulwark of its freedom. And they believed, because of the hard discipline of their profession, that they were obligated to participate in and to perpetuate that flow.

The basic protectee in the Caldwell, Bridge and Farr cases was not source A, or B or source C-although each of the newsmen in those situations had a subsidiary obligation to his sources and doubtless recognized itbut rather it was to that flow of information which would be endangered if they had acted otherwise. To put a stopper on the information available to a free people is to dry up the lifeblood of a free society. Mr. Justice Stewart put it best in his dissent in the Caldwell case: "Enlightened choice by an informed citizenry is the basic ideal upon which an open society is premised, and a free press is thus indispensable to a free society.

Gov. Meskill ended his argument with these words: "Granting the right of privileged communications to newsmen without state licensing, and assurance of their compliance with ethical standards would be absurd." We would only observe that it is even more absurd to postulate free flow of information without privileged communications to newsmen. And, in that context, it seems to us that Caldwell and the others showed us a good deal about personal and professional ethics and more than a little bit about honor as well, Fading Legend?

So long as he remained abroad, sending back a steady flow of instructions, manifestos and taped speeches to his hodgepodge following. Juan Peron was a powerful negative force in Argentine politics. No government in Buenos Aires, civilian or military, could rule effectively without support from the Peronists, who made up at least a third of the electorate.

Now back on home grounds for the first time in 17 years. Mr. Peron has abruptly become a man-rather than a legend-for those followers, many of whom are too young to remember from experience his divisive, repressive, nine-year rule. What they see is an old (77), cantious, indecisive politician, who gives them mostly vague generalizations rather than the clear-cut blueprint for the new Argentina they had anticipated.

It is obvious that some followers are already somewhat disillusioned, especially the Peronist youth, which had hoped that their hero would alight at Ezeiza Airport and sound the call for instant revolution. Other official followers, particularly middle-class Argentines and some union leaders, had always favored Peronismo without Peron. They were quite content to have him stay in Madrid while they exploited his name for their own ends.

For anyone who recalls Mr. Peron in power it is hard to envision him as unifier and pacifier of Argentina. Yet, he has met leaders of nearly every other party and faction in the Argentine political spectrum and conferred three times with an old enemy, Ricardo Balbin, presidential nominee of the Radical party, the largest political force after the

It is no mean achievement for Argentina's political future that these disparate groups have formed a committee to draw up demands on the ruling military junta for the promised elections next March. To date, about the only Peron demand the military leaders say they will not grant is for a lifting of the residence requirement that would bar Mr. Peron as a presidential candidate.

These are still early days in the story of Mr. Peron's return home, but thus far at least he has shown himself unwilling to force a showdown with the military regime and wary of calling his militants into the streets. President Lanusse and his colleagues have grounds for believing that their decision to allow Mr. Peron to some home was a gamble worth taking. It could help rebuild national political viability in Argenina, it has already helped to cut the Peron legend down to size.

Prolonged Dutch Crisis

Holland's commendable ability to get along quite well without a majority government will now be tested for a further indefinite period. The elections have prolonged, not ended, the crisis precipitated when the government lost its majority in July. Twenty-six parties went into the elections and none has emerged strong enough to form a government alone or with firm allies. There has been a shift to the left but the Liberals have also gained. The possible combinations of a coalition are too many to permit a quick solution.

It often seems surprising that a tidy people like the Dutch have such messy politics, but there are several good reasons. They are a nation of minorities protected by democratic traditions. They have discussed many types of electoral reform for many years, including the British system and the West German provision denying parliamentary representation to parties which get less than five percent, but so far they have not found any that win broad support and overcome their traditional reluctance to deprive minorities of direct representation.

PARIS—The people of the United States profess to believe in liberty, progress and civilization for all the world, and doubtless the great bulk of the people are sincere in their belief. Yet their very love of liberty may be the cause of leading the country into the borrors of war. Certain elements have been clamoring that there is no liberty in Cuba and it is the duty of the United States to change that situation. We do not agree, we counsel patience. moderation and understanding between Madrid, Hayana and Washington.

PARIS-While still lacking reliable information as to what is happening in Athens owing to strict censorship, which has resulted in stopping all private and official telegrams, French officials as well as influential Greeks in Paris fear that Greece is on the verge of a new sort of Fascist movement. According to the latest information, this is fomented from inside the capital, rather than outside, as in the case of Mussolini, but with the same fundamental idea, building up nationalism and suppressing opposition.

'Well, the China Opening Began With Ping-Pong Paddles'

In the Way of Peace

By Anthony Lewis

LONDON.—As Le Duc Tho and Henry Kissinger approach another round of talks, there are the most directly conflicting estimates of the prospect for agreement. Pessimistic reports from Paris say that the United States has attempted to reopen basic issues in the draft Vietnam peace terms published in October, But Washington officials, privately and publicly, say they are extremely optimistic that a final settlement will be reached soon. It is difficult for outsiders to make a judgment, not least because the leaked pessimism and optimism may themselves be negotiating tactics, aimed at a particular party or section of opinion. But it may be useful to canvass various theories on what is obstructing the peace that Kissinger said on Oct. 26 was 'a matter of weeks or less."

One theory is that Kissinger negotiated the October terms without the approval of his principal Both the American right and the South Vietnamese government have been promoting that view. Human Events, the right-wing paper, said quickly that President Nixon was "displeased." The Saigon radio accused Kissinger of "contradicting the President's thinking."

In Close Touch

Is it conceivable that Kissinger acted in ignorance or disregard of the President's views? No. Nixon of course kept in the closest touch with developments in the crucial October negotiating

Then there is the theory that the American administration never really intended to agree, that it was all a political trick. Once the draft terms leaked out, under circumstances that are still not clear, Kissinger did try to put the best political face on them, he certainly exaggerated the imminence of peace. But I find no reason to believe that he was party to a cynical deception election purposes.

What, then, has been the prob-lem since October? It can only be that Kissinger, and Nixon, underestimated the strength of President Thieu's likely objections to the draft agreement-and overestimated their ability to bring him along. Confronted with the reality of his opposition, Nixon evidently felt that it would be politically dangerous to try to resolve the problem before Nov. 7. Afterward, with his immense victory achieved, the President could take his time. The indications are that Nixon has now made his decision. We shall learn from the orders to Henry Kissinger: Is be going back to Paris to insist on changes of substance in the draft agree ment-changes to meet Thieu's demands? Or is he instructed to negotiate but in the end, after showing that he has tried, to sign on roughly the October terms if they are the best avail-

War or Peace

The difference could be one of war or peace. Kissinger must know that, for no American can be more aware than he of the immense difficulty of moving the North Vietnamese on what they regard as basic issues. His whole negotiating effort for four years bas been to try to avoid such confrontations when possible.

A good example is the issue of North Vietnamese troops in the admit having there and in any case regard as legitimate. long ago as May 31, 1971, the demand for a specific pledge of North Vietnamese troop withdrawal was dropped from the American negotiating terms. Again last May President Nixon offered a complete American withdrawal without a mutual pledge from Hanoi. To press the demand again now, at Saigon's urging, would be to put the whole agreement in jeopardy.

In short, the decisive question is what it always has been: Will an American President be willing to take the political risk of signing peace terms that do not have the active approval of Nguyen Van Thieu?

The danger is of falling into the old debusion that just a little more war, a little more bombing will improve the situation enough to satisfy Thieu. It is a delusion cause Thieu has made very clear that nothing will really satisfy him except total victorythe destruction of all forces in South Vietnam opposed to his regime. He will agree to compromise peace terms only when he sees that the United States is ready to sign without him.

would say that it has been devastating folly all along to make that policy dependent on Thieu. Devastating, that is, for the Vietnamese. In the month of October alone, during the apparent holdup of peace on Thieu's behalf. American planes dropped 94,364 tons of bombs on Vietnam, North and South. That brought the total for the Nixon years to more than 4 million tons.

Whatever the rights or wrongs of the past, can it really be that Richard Nixon and Henry Rissinger would carry that terror and destruction into the indefinite future rather than differ with Nguyen Van Thieu? It is on the belief that the answer to that question must be "no" that one's hope for peace in Vietnam now

Pondering the Future Of Henry Kissinger

By James Reston

WASHINGTON—President Nixon's decision to keep William Rogers as Secretary of State in the second term seems to suggest that Dr. Henry A. Eissinger will remain in the White House as assistant to the President for national security affairs, but this is not a settled ouestion.

The President has saked him to do so and he has agreed to stay on until the end of the Vietnam negotistions, which could be a life career, but actually he expects a cease-fire within a few weeks at most, and thereafter plans to take a long vacation and decide during that interlude whether to stev or resign.

Most men of power in Washington drive themselves to the point of exhaustion and occasionally your to go back to the quiet life, but usually the mood passes when they get a little aleep and begin to wonder what the quiet life would be like, assuming there's any such thing these

Example of Dulles

Former Secretary of State John Foster Dulles often talked of going home, but he always managed persuade himself that the republic might not survive such a loss. So he stayed on until his health broke, and by the end ha didn't know where home was, Dean Acheson managed to tol-erate the law after he left the State Department by ignoring it and writing graceful and witty essays about the more amisble or foolish qualities of great men. After tossing governments, continents and newspaper columnists

Oddly enough, the soldier statesmen of our time, who are supposed to love power more than anybody else, gave it up more giadly than most. Gen. Eisen-hower found golf in retirement to be more challenging and perplexing than running the world, which it undoubtedly is, but even though he never learned to putt after over 50 years of unremitting effort, he was happy at the end. So was Gen, Marshall, who had the good judgment never

Bill Rogers, like his predecessor at State, Dean Rusk, has agreed to stay on in the second term, and one can only hope that he doesn't regret that decision as much as Rusk did. Still, when a President, and particularly an old friend, who doesn't specialise in friendship, asks you to stick around, it is hard to put on. your hat and go.

problem. The book publishers are after him, and would probably pay him enough cold cash for his memoirs to establish a unisee how he could write about Chins, Moscow, Vietnam and all those girls as long as Nixon in the in the White House, and this is probably good judgmeet for Nixon has never liked to be

Henry's problem is that he peaked too soon-or too late. If he had discovered China in his 20s or in his 60s, the future would have been easier for him, but he will be 50 next May, and at 50, a man is a little too old to keep on working a 48-hour day, and a little too young to trade the White House for the Harvard

He has another problem. He has the gift of looking ot problems objectively, including the problem of himself and his own role in the federal establishment It is a rare wift around here. He has not only defined the foreign policy problems for presidential decision, but gradually and against his original intention, exercised independent jodgment and influence over decisions when he was asked.

Moreover, he has been the principal briefer, negotiator and spokesman in his field. He has covered more ground to the last four sessons than pro football's Larry Brown, and traveled the world in airplanes fitted oot like the board room of the Chase Manhattan Bank. But he is just scholar enough to keep wonder-ing what kind of government this is that would give a professor like him a job like this?

Beyond His Brief

Especially, since he is not a great believer in personal diplomacy, or centralized policy-making shielded from questioning by executive privilege. Lately, he has been favolving the State Department more and more in the Vietnam negotiations, and has been rewarded for his pains by being charged with going beyond his brief in the Paris talks and falling into pitfalls from which he had to be rescued by the State Department pros. It's not true, but thet's what happens wheo you begin to get a little democracy into dinlomacy.

No doubt Henry will manage to overcome his doubts when be thinks about the alternative of writing books, teaching Talleyrand to skeptical studeots, and riding op to New York oo the shuttle to attend tens at the .Council on Foreign Relations. The facts are fairly plain: From here on out he has nowhere to go but down. He might just leave and he is clearly pondering the question. But as the man said: How do you keep 'em down on the farm after they've seen (Yes is Judga Webs. pressed concern over the procedures by which airline travelers are being searched and, especially, the consequences of many of such searches. It is the ACLU's point that the hijacking problem is proving to be an invitation to lawiessness by federal agents.

The raw data are these. During the past 22 months, 6,000 airline travelers were arrested after being searched. But only 20 percent of these were arrested fur carrying contraband related directly to hijacking. The federal regulations involving airplanes tell you that you cannot take aboard weapons which are related to the hijacking enterprise. For instance, you can't carry aboard a machine gun, or a mortar, or a

Generic Point

But what if you carry aboard, say, a pound of heroin? It is unreasonable for the people who search you to contend that it was your intention to stick the pilot with a hypodermic needle, transfuse him with rapid joy, and in his transfixed condition coo hira into taking you to Havana. In this sense the ACLU people are as a matter of fact quite plansi-ble. The passengers who have Critics, seeing the familiar ble. The passengers who have choice for American policy today, been arrested, while in the process of boarding aircraft carrying dicted from the act of hijacking. The generic point is therefore raised: Should an arresting officer be permitted to opportunize on chance discoveries of contraband? The principal judicial finding, thus far, is that of Jugge Jack Weinstein, federal judge of the eastern district of New York, who ruled 18 months ago that a frisker is entitled to move against targets of opportunity. "If a

"frisk" for weapons is conducted in good faith to locate a weapon believed to be present on the basis of information generated by well-administered federal antihijacking system and does not go beyond the limits of what is required to uncover such an object, seizure of evidence in crimes other than those involved in boarding sircraft with a weapon is justified. The officer need not close his eyes to evidence of other crimes which he may uncover."

The Pourth Amendment of the Constitution protects us against unreasonable searches and seizures." It would be unreasonable -to reach for an example-for federal (or state) agents to search on boarding, say, the bus from Winnetka to Chicago: for the simple reason that there isn't a sufficient historical incidence, on the bus from Winnetka to Chicago, of busiackers. The need for airborne security, by contrast, is historically demonstrated.

But, admitting the constitution ality of search, what about the constitutionality of seizure: of unrelated contraband? The ACLU veers toward saying that you can't seize it. Technically the questions are various: a) Can you seize it? (Yes, is the answer of most people; b) Can you offer it in evidence in order to prosecute same old direction.

(I es stein's answer; No, the ACLUtypes seem to be saying), -

As regards the latter point, one runs into the generic precedent of Weeks vs. the United States, which found in 1914 against the use as evidence of illegally seized material. It is not elear that the Weeks ban would apply in the disputed cases: because if John Jones is legally searched and found to have in his possessiou illegal goods, it hasn't been established that these are inadmissible. They are, one would think, a social dividend. If, on investigating Lizzle Borden's quarters in . scarch of an axe, one finds instead a hand grenade, the operative judicial assumption is that you can not only seize it but also introduce it into whatever court is concerned with pressing antiis concerned with pressing antihand grenade laws.

Same Old Direction

The philosophical point gradnally crystallizes, and it bears of course on the great socio-juridical question: How do you even op the disequilibrium now working in favor of the criminal? ACLU-types are fanatically concerned with the defendants is a Rev rights. They are never around to suggest judicial or legislative reforms designed to strengthen the hand of the innocent. Permissiveness

James Reston, in "The Tyranny of Words" (CHT, Nov. 25-26), objects to the fact that President Nixon fights permissiveness in some areas, and not in others. It seems to me one should be thankful for what mercies we have! Permissiveness is such a perverse doctrine, and goes so much against human nature and good common sense, that any attack on it is to be appreciated. As to the fight against permissiveness in business, Democrats, for all their traditions, have done little or nothing about it for some time. President Kennedy-uttered some strange remarks about his father not liking big business; apart from that, and a rather inconclusive battle with U.S. Steel, there was no indication that he really intended to do battle with our big corporations. On the contrary, all has been compromise. And ley Act, has been put to sleep of attitude of acceptance of government!

I consider Mr. Reston's article pernicious. Far from the middle class being "comfortable," they have suffered more than anyone else over the past 20 years. It is no longer the hard-working, conscientious, self-sacrificing famfly man who is rewarded in the United States. It is the demagogues, the violent, the irresponsible, the pathological, and the aggressive male. This is hardly a very accurate list, but it will do for the moment!

SEC Details 'Systematic Looting' of IOS

By Philip Greer NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (WP). In just over two years, Robert L. Vesco has traveled from the relative obscurity of a manufacturing company in New Jersey to center stage in what is alleged to be one of the biggest international swindies of all time. In those two years, he has solidated his hold on IOS, buying more than 6 million sheres owned by Bernard Cornfeld, its founder and chairman who was deposed in April, 1970. In March, 1972, Mr. Vesco and his "group" allegedly launched their scheme to strip IOS of its assets. The first step was to transfer his stock in TOS to a company called Kilmorey Investments. In announcing the transac-tion, ICC reported the "total divorcement of itself and its personnel from TOS" for a payment of $2.8 million. What Mr. Vesco did not disclose, the commission charged, is that Kilmorey had no assets of its own and that the only money it had was advanced by Bahamas Commonwealth Bank controlled by Mr. Vesco. The second step was to take control of the fund's stock holdings away from the Bank of New York, which had been the custodian. In the third phase, Mr. Vesco packaged all of ICC's investments in IOS and transferred them to Global Holdings, Ltd., a dependent company like Kilmorey and owned by Norman Leblanc, who is also a defendant in the case. The transaction in reality gave Mr. Vesco complete control of the assets of the IOS funds, according to the II.S commission

Phase four of the operation actually began in April, 1972, before phase three was completed, when the managers of the TOS funds—under Mr. Vesco's orders-began liquidating $224 million worth of marketable, mostly high-grade II.S. securities

Fund of Funds, the flagship fund of the IOS group, had assets of more than $113 million, including $55 million in marketable stocks and $51.2 million in interest-bearing deposits. Starting on June 18, 'virtually all' of its marketable assets were sold. Other TOS fund portfolios were prac-

U.S. Oil, Gas Needs Set Ship Bonanza

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 1.-A vast new ocean-going transportation and handling system is being created to link abundant crude oil and natural gas supplies of the Persian Gulf, Australia and the Soviet Union with the Unit-

It is required because the United States needs massive amounts of energy to supplement its dwindling domestic supplies. The enormous undertaking will dwarf the giant tankers and facilities already in existence.

Just building the complicated, expensive ships to haul liquefied natural gas here from overseas could add up to "the biggest shipbuilding bonanza since World War II," suggests Marine Engineering Log, a trade publication. And they are not just giant frigerators, too. In addition to ships, special facilities will be needed to handle and store oil and to liquely and store natural gas at scaports.

it to a temperature of 260 degrees below zero and keeping it there until it reaches its destination, In the liquid state, gas is only one-tenth to one-twentieth as bulky as it is naturally, making shipment economically feasible.

That requires special, expensive tankers. Pacific Lighting

Corp., .the parent of Southern California Gas Co., estimates that it will need about 20 such tankers to bring LNG from Alaska, Indonesia and Australia to southern California.

At a cost of about $100 million apiece, those tankers comprise $2 billion of the $3-billion total capital investment the company expects it will need if the three projects are developed. When talks involving the shipment of Siberian natural gas to Japan and the United States were confirmed recently it was estimated that up to 25 LNG tankers would be required for the U.S. portion alone, In all, says Keith C. McKinney, director of LNG projects for Pacific Lighting, not less than 100 such tankers will be required in the next 10 years to handle burgeoning world trade in LNG. Complicated Problem

Transportation of imported crude oil promises to be more complicated-and at least as exensive. About 25 percent of total U.S. oil demand is already supplied by foreign sources. But by 1980, according to estimates, imports will jump to more than 50 percent. By then, the United States will have to import up to 12 million barrels of oil a day.

That means a tanker fleet with a capacity as large as the fleet which served the entire world just five years ago will be required to meet U.S. demands alone, says Harry Bridges, president of Shell Oil Co.

If ships in the "superianker" category are used, as seems likely—they carry 200,000 tons or more of oil—about 325 will be needed, Mr. Bridges adds. The cost: $60 million or more each. But there is a problem. No U.S. port is capable of handling a ship even half that size. One alternative is to transfer of from supertankers docked in deep-water terminals planned for Canada and the Bahamas into smaller ships that could enter U.S. ports. However, that would lion following eat up a third or more of the in September. cost savings from using supertankers to begin with.

More promising, according to he Maritime Administration study, are deep-water oil ter-minals located a few miles off U.S. shores, and connected by

Soviets Seen Raising Loans in World Market

-Chase Manhattan Bank today forecast huge Soviet financing needs in both the long-term and short-term markets and estimated that exploitation of natural gus resources in eastern Siberia is likely to require up to $7 bil-lion and development of gas in western Siberia will need another $12 billion to $14 billion.

Chase is preparing to open a representative office in Moscow, the first such U.S. facility there in 50 years. Beyond banking industry ered-its, these needs will mean heavy Soviet financing in the world's capital markets. The Chase officials forecast increasingly beavy borrowing by the Soviet Union in the Eurodoliar market and eventually Soviet bond issues offered publicly in the U.S. market. Squeeze Possible

"These capital requirements could put a real squeeze on the markets for many years to come,' forecast Robert Blomquist, senior vice-president of Chase's international department. The nation's present reserves of gold and forelen currencies to pay for imports and development of resources are not known, but estimates put them at anything from $2 billion to $6 billion, said Michael Curran. a vice-president in the international department

Chase's involvement in East-West finance is expanding on several fronts, Mr. Blomquist said. Aside from the representative office, it has "the lion's share" of a $750-million eredit made to Russia by banks in order to finance massive grain purchases from the United States (the banks said the Soviet Union has drawn very lightly on this credit so far, indicating it is paying cash for the grain beginning to arrive in Russian ports). In addition, the bank is plan-

Here are the five simple steps you take to place your portfolio under The Danforth Associates Investment Management:

1. Write us now for a 42-page booklet describing this tested plan. There is no obligation and no one will call you. We serve clients all over the world (in at least 64 countries) solely by correspondence.

2. Study our procedures and objectives. See how we will try to help your capital grow by carefully selecting and supervising your investments in leading common stocks. Compare the 15-year "Performance Record" of all the funds we have been privileged to manage.

3. Send us a "Request Form" telling the amount of money in cash or security values you want us to manage, how you would like your dividends and fees handled, and the data we need on your own financial plans.

4. Open your own brokerage account with a large NYSE Member Firm which, for efficiency, has a special office serving only Danforth chents. Deposit your cash and/or securities in this account and give them limited power to accept instructions from us - with all transactions to be made only in your name.

5. From this point on, our analysts will make decisions to try to help your capital grow as fast as possible consistent with reasonable precautions. As in any selection of investments, losses do and will occur, but you will know their decisions promptly. You receive monthly accountings and quarterly evaluations. You can withdraw at any

The plan thus far has proved, we believe, especially efficient in providing capital growth supervision to portfolios starting with from $5,000 to $50,000. To take your first step now, simply write "send booklet" with your name and address and mail to Dept. w-27.

NES_ATLANTIC'S EUROPORT

Nowadays the world of commerce and industry is more and more characterized by the existence of units ge size in order to obtain the lowest possible costs—essential condition for a good competitive position. Big units need special access conditions such as large harbours and good means of communication. Facing onstant of the big industrial complexes, the Portuguese Government looked for an adequate area for the ntation of a great complex for basic industries.

After a careful study based on the conditions already mentioned and taking into account some important

-Territorial occupation; -Port possibilities;

-Road and rail transports;
-Urbanism and social infrastructures;

-Pollution control;

-Economy and exploration; -Planning and coordination;

decided that Sines would be the ideal place for such an enterprise.

Later on a special authority, the "Gabinete da Area de Sines," depending directly from the Prime ter's Office was created. The G.A.S. was entrusted with the following main tasks:

-The development of an industrial area;

-The creation of a deep water port to serve it;
-The planning and promotion of the necessary supporting structures, including a new town; creation of a pole of development, as an instrument for a better territorial occupation, trying to avoid the overpopulated Lisbon and Oporto industrial zones.

To establish the industrial complex and port at Sines, two other important factors were taken in con-tion: its geographical situation and its natural conditions. Sines is placed in the South part of the West Coast of Portugal and serves the large "hinterland" of the t Portuguese Province, Alentejo, so the development of this area will offer the possibility of a better living

Besides, the natural conditions of Sines Cape permit us to obtain a deep water harbour capable of shelter-a a first phase, the biggest ships actually in construction—gigantic tankers of 500,000 t.d.w.—at a cost con-d to be a reasonable one, and a relatively cheap modification in equipment will anable Sines to receive 000 t.d.w. tankers.

This seems still more important when we think of European limitations to get deep water harbours at able costs.

The new port will be equipped with an oceanic terminal for the gigantic tankers, with depths of 40 m. is also foreseen the possibility to receive the big bulk carriers of the O.O. and O.B.O. type in an ore all with depths of 25 m. It will also have a good and modern fishing port, to support the large Portuguese fish-However its main purpose is to eerve the industrial area and general cargo, especially heavy imported nent and local products for export.

The construction of this harbour and the implantation of the basic industries will give possibilities to the pment of a very large industrial zone.

The basic industries authorised by the Portuguese Government and already in a starting phase are: the lation of a crude-oil refinery with the capacity of 10 million tons/year which will be operated by a Portu-Company—PETROSUL—formed by the Portuguesa groups, SONAP (Sociedade Nacional de Petrôleos, L.) and CUF (Companhia União Fabril, S.A.R.L.) and a petrochemical complex with a minimum production ity of 200,000 tons/year of ethylene, operated by another firm to be formed by the same groups of These two units and the port will be the true motor of this new area, where we hope, within a short time other industries might be seen.

"Gabinete da Area de Sines" is also studying the development of a chemical industry based on the pyrites ustrel deposit (200 millions tons of ore reserves), located 80 kms. East of Sines. It is expected that the ation of pyrites will raise during the present decade from 600,000 to at least 3 millions tons per year and at matter an industrial complex will be set up at Sines for the processing.

Sines area will be provided with a road network of international characteristics linked to the highway system and a large program of social infrastructures.

The plan also includes the construction of 15,000 dwellings and the creation of adequate living conditions for a population expected to be around 80,000 inhabitants in 1980.

With this plan the Portuguese Government hopes to improve the living standard of the population of the South region of its country and so avoid the emigration stream that is occurring to the countries of Central

In all this project there is a large possibility for international collaboration and it would be desirable that foreign investors would come to Sines to help Portugal in increasing its economic development, for one can trust that Sines, owing to its privileged situation, will become a true Atlantic Europort.

and simplicity and crystal clarity are what he always strove for in his writing and drawing. And it seems somehow a pox on his memory, not to say gratuitous, to study him so ponderously, or to write, as Prof. Holmes does elsewhere: "In a world filled with conflict and guilt, the dog, with his simple needs and unquestioning loyalties, represents a wholeness and harmony with the outer world and the world of self which man has tragically lost." Thurber himself would have grouned, I think, or at least hastened to compose a parody. Yet the plain truth is that when I came across Prof. Holmes's musings on "Do You Went to Make Something Out of It?" I was smiling too hard at PUSS-GRAPPLE and PUSSGRAPE to be much bothered. I was too bemused by memories of the titanic games of Superghosts that Thurber's piece inspired when it Very well, then, first appeared (and the clever person who stumped us with ghth of his subject. If those matters are not settled, onother strike may be called by the players, and many persons attending baseball's busloess nicetings here believe it would be more grave than the players' 13day strike last April

The owners proposals were made public Wednesday by com-missioner Bowie Kuhn, who call-ed them historic but who also reported that the players' negotlators had refused them. The most far-reaching point, for the first time in the game's history, would modify the reserve clause in contracts—which blnds a player to his team until he is traded or retires.

The owners, in what they termed "a spectacular plan," offered to make any player a free agent if he were oot paid $30,000 in salary after five years or $40,000 after eight. And after 10 years in the majors, if the last five were served with the same team,

Killy, Schranz Said Interested In Slalom Duel

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 1 (AP). -A chairman of a local alpine skling club here sald yesterday that Jean-Claude Killy of France and Karl Schranz of Austria have expressed interest in his proposal to match them in a sislom in Pebruary for total prize money of $10,000.

The chairman, Edwin Madi, said he expects final answers from the skiers next week. Killy, 29, a triple gold medalist in the 1968 Winter Olympics, made his pro skling debut last weekend after a four-year absence from competition.

Schranz, 34, whose specialty is the downhill, was banned from the Sapporo Olympics this year and retired. He has won just about every major race, but never captured an Olympic gold medal despite competing in three Winter Games.

the pension plan will expire a player could not be traded March 31. Other Proposals

Other parts of the offer would raise the minimum pay from $12,500 now to $15,000 in threa years; improve pensions; reduce number of players under cach team's control from 40 to 38, and cut varsity rosters from 25

The players' counter-proposals have not been made public, but they were reported yesterday to

After five years as a profes-sional (three of them in the major leagues), a player would become a free agent if he was earning less than the average blg-leagus salary, now about $35,000. After seven years as a pro, five in the majors, he would be free to make his own deal if not earning 1 1/2 times the average. And after nine years, he would have to be making twice the average.

· No matter what he was earning, a player would become a free agent after seren years in the majors, then again after 12 years and after 17. If ha negotiated a deal for himself in effect, sold himself to the highest bidder—the team that got him would pay the team that lost him an indemnity equal to half his salary.

· Fach year, 10 players from team's master roster of 40 and five from the varsity roster of 25 would be freed from "protection" and offered to other clubs in the league, but a man would have to be notified by his team that he was being nifered for such a draft and, if he wished, he could remove himself from the available list.

 If a player and his team had oot agreed on his salary by Feb. 1 any year, the dispute would be submitted to binding arbitration. This would be similar to the system followed now in the National Hockey League,

• If a player was traded, he would have the option of asking his new team to reopen his contract. If they failed to agree on new terms, it would go to binding arbitration. At present, when a player is traded, his nid contract goes with him.

The players also were reported asking that an eight-year veteran have a voice in any trade that is, he could refuse to go. But this item, like most of the nthers, was considered negotiable. The split, according to the owners, centered on the twn "philosophical differences" in the talks; free-agent status after seven years and binding arbitra-tion of salary disputes.

Pistons Triumph; Lanier is injured

DETROIT, Dec. 1 (UPI).—Despite the loss of center Bob Lanier, who suffered a pinched nerve in the first quarter, the Detroit Pistons came back from a 18-point delicit to defeat the Buffalo Braves, 127-118, in last night's nnly National Basketball Association game.

Trailing, 54-38, in the second quarter, Detroit outscored the Braves, 32-15, to end the half leading, 70-69. Don Adame and guard John Mengelt each hit 11 in the quarter.

Tough Tests Set for USC

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (UFI) .-In addition to the Army-Navy clash, two intense rivairies are scheduled tomorrow in college football as top-ranked Southern California hosts Notre Dame and second-ranked Alabama plays at home against Anburn.

Southern California is favored by 13 1/2 points to win its 11th game of the year against no defeats. The Irish have not triumphed in the 45-year-old rivalry since 1965, when they rip-ped USC, 51-0, in the final gama of the year and took top rank-

Notre Dame, 8-1, will be tough. An Irish victory could move Alabams into the No. 1 spot.

The Cotton Bowl-bound Crimson Tide will have their hands full battling highly ranked Auburn, the nation's ninth-ranked "Auburn is a solid, physical football team," says Alabama coach Paul (Bear) Bryant, "They have good people and line up one-on-one and just whip you. It isn't a fancy team but one that gets results, and that is all that counts."

Third-ranked Oklahoma takes Oklahoma State tomorrow. Oklahoma is a 21-point favorite to gain the victory it needs to clinch the Big Eight Conference. In other action, Tennessee meets Vanderbilt and Louisiana State takes on Tulane.

Cadets and other Army personnel looking for good omens, see a similarity between this year and last, when Army beat Navy, 34-23. A year ago Army entered the Navy game with a 5-4 won-lost record, the same as this season. Last year Army defeated Pit's-burgh by 3 points in its last game before playing Navy. This year the Cadets defeated Holy Cross by 2 points in their last game. In each case Army came from 7 points down in the final quarter to win with a Fink touchdown pass followed by a Jim Barclay field goal.

Navy is favored by 8 1/2 points. The competition, as usual, started early in the week. By William N. Wallace

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (NYT) .-Of the many ascents and descents among the teams of the National Football League this season, the rise of the Cleveland Browns is the most surprising and has received the least attention.

The successes of the Miami Dolphins, the Washington Redskins and the Pittsburgh Steelers have often been mentioned but few seem to realize where tha Browns are, and where they came from. They are tied for first in the AFC Central Division with the Steelers, their opponent oo Sunday at Pittsburgh.

The Browns lost all six of their presesson games and three of their first five in regular scason. After losing to Chicago, 17-0, at home on Oct, 15, they were a most ordinary football team with no future. What happened?

"The improvement of Mike Phipps, great team effort and the dependability of our defense were the factors in turning this ball club around," said Nick Skerich, the coach. The Browns beat Buffalo, 27-10, last Sunday for their sixth straight victory.

line, which began to protect Phipps, the young quarterback, and the team has yet to lose with Demarco in the line-up. Following are the outlook and betting choices for the NFL games this weekend, with won-lost-tied records in parentheses:

8 seconds, the Steelers were the stronger team. A key player is hurt, Sam Davis, a guard and Pittsburgh's best offensive lineman. The Browns are fit. Betting choice: Pittsburgh by 71/2 points. OAKLAND (7-3-1) at SAN DIEGO (4-6-1)—They played to a 17-17 tie on Oct. 1 and both have improved considerably since. Harland Svare, the coach, says the only thing that will stop the Chargers' rise is the end of the season. Betting choice: Oakland by 31,2. DENVER (3-8-0) at KANSAS CITY (3-5-0)-The Chiefs are the bust of the year and how seven regulars are hurting, Mika Livingston may start at quarterback. The Broncos have lost two more defensive starters and they are giving up an average of 26 points a game. Betting choice:

Kansas City by 9. MIAMI (11-0-0) at NEW ENG-LAND (2-9-0)—The Dolphins lost at Foxboro, Mass., a year ago. It seems inconceivable oow. Paul Warfield is due back from the injured list to sharpen up for tha playoffs, but oot Bob Griese. Betting choice: Miami by 16. BUFFALO (3-8-0) at BALTIproblem—they have several—is the defensive line, which breaks down because Bob Lilly is burt but continoes to play. The Cardinals fade early. Betting choice: Dallas by 11. WASHINGTON (10-1-0)

PHILADELPHIA (2-8-1.-The Redskins can clinch at least a tle for the division title and then they won't have to worry about the Dallas game next week. They finish at home against Buffalo. Ed Khayat, the coach, said all the Eagle regulars but two. Ron Porter and Doug Creech, quit when playing the Glants. Betting choice: Washington by 16 1/3. DETROIT (7-4-0) at GREEN BAY (7-4-0) .- The deciding break in their division will nut come until oext week when the Packers play Minnesota. Scott Hunter, who has done poorly lately, will be the Green Bay quarterback. They also have defensive injuries to worry about. Running back Mel Farr starts for the Lions over Steve Owens, who is hurt. Betting choice: Detroit

CHICAGO (3-7-1) at MINNE-SOTA (6-5-0).—The Bears' best game was a 13-10 victory over the Vikings—long ago. They have lost four in a row. Leg injuries have slowed Alan Page and Carl Eller of Minnesota but Fran Tarkenton is having his best season ever. Betting choice: Minnesota by 13.

Monday Night LOS ANGELES (5-5-1) at SAN FRANCISCO (6-4-1).-The Rams like to believe they always beat the 49ers, who have won just one of the last 10 contests between the two Coast rivals. It was the Rams by 31-7 last Oct. 8. If Jimmy Johnson cannot play, there will be a big hole in the 48ers' deep defense. Be choice: San Francisco by 6.

The Nixon Cabinet

Nixon has just announced he will work more closely with his cabinet in his second term than he did in his first. For four years the President has preferred to work with only a few close White House aides.

at the start of the Nixon administration, the President announced that he not only would work very closely with his cabinet officers, but also that he planned to have cabinet so they could better understand the workings of the government. In a much publicized meeting, husbands and wives of the President's cabinet were photographed around a large table with Mr. Nixon presiding.

As far as anyone knows not only was this the last meeting the wives attended, but shortly after that the President stopped meeting with the husbands as well.

The cabinet officers may have taken all this in stride but the wives remained bitter to the end.

"I thought when my husband became a cabinet officer," one wife told me, "he would he work-ing until midnight, seven days a week. But he was home every night at five o'clock, and I couldn't get him out of the house on weekends." * * *

"Well, what was wrong with that?"

"The first thing he would do when he came in was ask, Did the President call?' I would al-ways have to reply, 'He didn't.' Then be would say to the kids, 'I don't want anyone to touch the phone while I'm home. The White House may be trying to get me.'

"Every time we wanted to call someone we had to go to the drugstore. When the phone rang he would jump np and grah it and say, 'Yes sir, Mr. President.' It was usually my mother calling and he'd have a fit."

"There must have been a lot of tension in the house," I said. "Month after month he brooded about it. Finally it got so bad I hand again."

WASHINGTON. - President asked, Why don't you call the President?' He said, You're right, I'll call the President!' He picked op the phone and asked information for the number of the White House. Then he dialed the number. "The whole family stood behind It has been forgotten now, but him waiting breathlessly. I wish to speak to the President, he said. There was a pause. Yes, the call is paid for, he said angrily. They switched him to another person who made him spell his name. Then they asked him for his title. He said he was a cabinet officer. This apparently had some effect because they switched him to another person, who told him the President was not there. This, of course, was a lie because we had just seen him on television speaking from the Oval Room.

"My husband said, 'It's urgent that I see the President on some very important business concerning my department.' The person on the other end of the line asked him to hold on. Then he told my husband he could see the President at next Sunday's prayer breakfast meeting at the White House, 'Good,' my husband said,

'I have to talk to him.' "The person on the other end of the line replied. We said you could see the President next Sunday-we didn't say anything about talking to him."

. . . "And that was the last time your husband saw the President?" asked.

"No. as a matter of fact, we saw him last week-three years

"We were at Rockefeller Center, Christmas shopping, and who should come by but President Nix. on and Pat. My husband thought fast and pushed himself through the Secret Service men. Hello, Mr. President!' he shouted.

"President Nixon held out his hand. Where you from?' the President asked.

"'Washington, D.C.' my husband replied.

"'Well,' said the President, 'how do you like those Redskins?' And before my husband could answer the President walked on."

"I'll bet you that's something you two will never forget," I said. "I should say so, My husband said he'd never wash his right

The House That Ben Franklin Built

DARIS (IHT).—Philadelphia needs help. The Independence National Historical Park Advisory Commission has announced a plan to restore extensively the site of Benjamin Franklin's residence at a cost of $3 million. The Franklin Court project, to be undertaken by the National Park Service, will cover a three-quarter-acre site between 3d and 4th Streets. from Market to Chestnut Streets, and will include not only Franklin's house, but also its courtyard garden, neighboring 18th-century houses, a post office and print shop.

It is a grand idea, but there's a problem: No one quite knows what Benjamin Franklin's house, built in 1765 and razed in 1812, looked like. This is where the need for help comes in: A small watercolor entitled "Franklin's House off High Street" is known to exist, and a photograph of the watercolor is also believed to "Since Franklin was ambassador to France for several years and also spent a lot of time in England, it would seem entirely possible that someone in Europe might have a watercolor or other rendition of his Philadelphia home," says Arthur C. Kaufman, chairman of the advisory commission.

"Ws do have a roughly drawn floor plan of the first floor and a scale plan of the second floor," Mr. Kaufman says. The foundations of the house have also been excavated and the building has been described as "three-storied with a four-sided But what did it look like?

A missing watercolor that could solve the mystery was sold in 1948 in Lancaster, Pa., to settle the estate of Ellen Gordon Thackara, grand-daughter of the Philadelphia engraver James Thackara,

Those who recall seeing the picture say it was one of several watercolor views of old Philadelphia, 8 by 10 inches in size and pasted, one to a page, in a tattered scrapbook, Most of the paintings were signed J.T. for James Thackers. (1767-1848), or possibly for James Trenchard, Thackara's brotherin-law and teacher of engraving. After the scrapbook was sold in 1948, it is known to have been broken up and re-sold, painting by painting.

This missing painting is the only known pictorial record of Franklin's house, a fact astonishing to Americans in Paris where it would seem that Franklin's every step has been lovingly recorded, from his meeting with Voltaire at the Academy of Sciences on April 29, 1778, ("Solon and Sophocles embraced," the gazettes reported in excitement) to his happy days in Auteuil ("Donnez-mot des nouvelles de l'Académie des belles-lettres d'Auteuil," he wrote to Volney from America) and Passy, where he set up a print shop, made experiments with his lightning conductor, and had himself powdered and bewigged to call on Louis XVI

The restored Franklin house in Philadelphia will, if a roof and sides can be found for it, bouse personal belongings of Franklin and artifacts from the house that archaeologists have

Letters from Franklin's wife, Deborah, give an idea of the 9-room interior. In 1765 she wrote her husband, then in London: "Now for the room we call yours; there is in it your desk, the harmonics made like a desk, a large chest with all writings that were in your room downstairs, the box of glass for music and for the electricity, and all your clothes and the pictures, as I don't drive mails lest it should not be

Franklin did not live in the house during its first 10 years and never shared it with Deborah, who died in 1774. He was there while revising the Declaration of Independence, slept there after signing the engrossed copy on Aug. 2, 1776, and died there on April 17, 1790.

Despite the fact that they don't know what Benjamin Franklin's house looked like, the Philadelphians are pressing on with their costly reconstruction. If a photograph of the Thackars painting or some other visual record does not turn up, they have a plan to build a rather dumb open frame of stainless steel over the foundations. It looks from the plan like an outline built from pipe cleaners, but the planners call, it "a sculpture-like structure approximating the profile of the house to give a sense of its presence in the space."

If the missing watercolor or another drawing or painting turns up, all will be saved. And the savior will get a reward: a trip to Philadelphia as the guest of the Independence Hall Association and a specially designed Franklin commemorative

PEOPLE: Zukor to Be Feted On 100th Birthday

Hollywood is planning an industrywide gala birthday party for film ploneer Adolph Zukor when he becomes 100 years old on Jan. 7. Frank Yablans, president of Paramount Pictures, which Zukor founded, said the extravaganza, at the Beverly Hilton Hotel, will feature entertainment by stars who have worked for Zukor, including Bob Hope, Bing Crosby, Dorothy Lamour, Mariene Dic-trich, Cary Grant and Gloria Swanson. The event is expected to raise $500,000 for charities.

Yablans said that Zukor, now chairman emeritus of Paramount, will attend the dinner. "His mind is as lucid as any young man I've met," the present Paramount chief says of Zukor. "He still comes to his office in New York and is aware of everything that goes on including "The Godfather' grosses."

Zukor emigrated in 1898 from his native Hungary to the United States, where he attended night school and worked in the hardware and upholstery fields and as a fur cutter. In 1904 he became associated with a theater owner, and eight years later founded Paramount's predecessor firm, Famous Players Film Co.

Another kind of hirthday was that of Mrs. William Kamer, who spent much of it hobbling around her home in Louisville, Ky., her ankles fastened by handcutts. She had put her feet on a coffee table and sat back to watch TV, when suddenly her son Bobby, 5, snapped the cuffs onto her ankles. She hobbled and hopped, looking for a key to them. But the only key was with another son, who was away at a Boy Scout meeting. Mrs. Kamer finally freed one ankle, using a table knife and a shoehorn, but the other handcuff wouldn't budge. She drove to a firehouse, where a fireman asked: "You sure you aren't an espaced convict, lady?" Forsaking comedy for charity, the fireman then used bolt cutters and freed her fettered foot. She went home and bathed ber swollen ankles in ice water, and made one change. in Bobby's Christmas-gift listscratching off one pair of handcuffs.
